The Italian pavilion is a right show. It just may be in the wrong place. As Glenn O'Brien keenly observed about German painter Albert Oehlen, who would have added juice to this show, "There's only one ...

THE ALCHEMY OF CURATING

The technique, which intriguingly fills all negative space, evokes the work of German artists Markus Lüpertz and Albert Oehlen, as well as the oeuvre of certain artists of the New Leipzig School.

Anthropos as artistic expression

The crude mystification of Albert Oehlen also comes to mind. As in a "squeegee" abstraction by Gerhard Richter, the original source images are rendered unrecognizable by Mehretu's interventions. This ...
