In this sequel to Conversations with Kentucky Writers, L. Elisabeth Beattie brings together in-depth interviews with sixteen of the state's premiere wordsmiths. This new volume offers the perspectives of poets, journalists, and scholars as they discuss their views on creativity, the teaching of writing, and the importance of Kentucky in their work. They talk frankly about how and why they do what they do. The writers speak for themselves, and their thoughts come alive on the page. Beattie's interviews reveal the allegiances and alliances among Kentucky writers that have shaped literary trends by bringing together people with shared interests, values, subjects, and styles. The interviewees include authors who are captivated in other writers and in what they have to say about the process and craft of writing; educators who are interested in Kentucky writers and what their work reveals about the nature of creativity; and historians who are concerned with Kentucky's literary and cultural heritage. The interviews reveal patterns in Kentucky literature from mid-century to the millennium, as authors talk about how their sense of place has changed over the decades and reveal the ways in which the roots of Kentucky writing have produced a literary flowering at the century's end. Includes: Sallie Bingham, Joy Bale Boone, Thomas D. Clark, John Egerton, Sarah Gorham, Lynwood Montell, Maureen Morehead, John Ed Pearce, Ameilia Blossom Pegram, Karen Robards, Jeffrey Skinner, Frederick Smock, Frank Steele, Martha Bennett Stiles, Richard Taylor, and Michael Williams.

Have you ever had the opportunity to read a book that has two different stories that weave together, then become one? To become self-completing in the very last sentence.? Have you ever found yourself acting out, and then catch yourself? Is someone else pointing out to you a new concept. A new language, and then take notice of it? What has been written, is the work of three entities. I am not able to discern the actual author, of which poems I have written. Therefore, on Kindle, as well as with this first book, it is an anthology, written by no less than three people. Why can this be a "blow your mind" situation? Because I have been diagnosed as having three distinct personalities. Three distinct interpretations, viewpoints, and styles of writing. All three are me, which must be applied in a plural fashion. As I worked on these poems, and started to recognize that I was writing poems about things that I was totally unfamiliar with, I was quite surprised. I am a non-fiction author, and poetry is a new language for me. It will soon be a new language, for all of poetry. How do I write the poems, with dual applications. To provide at least two poems, for every title. The last, concluding stanza of each poem, meeting together as one. Somehow, it worked. The poems are a personal message to you, applicable to your world today. This book is truly, a "manipulation" of word puzzles. Two different poems are presented to you at the beginning. As you read through the poem, the second stanza proves contrary, to the meaning of the first. Then the first connects to the second. Each poem is, as compared to other poems, long. The two final stanzas, present the two poems again. The second four line stanza, is again presented as next to the last. The last stanza of each poem, is your awareness, of what the message of the entire poem is, and how they merged into one. With very few exceptions, every poem is written for modern day situations. One of the very few books that make the redundancy of a very old cultural experience exciting, and a life lesson to learn. There are two volumes to this particular "Touched" series of books. I do this as a courtesy to you, to give you a breather. Having to figure out some eighty plus conclusions, in two books? It was a tough nut to write, and is a tough nut to read, without having to pause. It is not just because of the style that this has been written, but because you have to figure out how each poem applies to you. This is self-help book. It makes you define the quality of your thought processes. It re-defines to you, that in this world without law, there are no simple solutions. But then, that there is always a solution, there is always a next step. For me, this was an exceptional challenge. For you, it is an opportunity to figure out three people, all at once!

This book is a compilation of poems written by inspiration by Professor Emeritus Charles Alan Long, that reflect a long career of scholarship with many historical and lyrical expressions hidden by layers of research and teaching. A chronology of sorts, it begins in Dr. Long ' s youth in college over sixty years ago, and continued until he was 80, as a teacher, professor of research, museum director, soldier, with success in bio-mathematics, natural history, as a philosopher, critic, and member of a progressive family. Some current, practical problems studied from the vantage of evolutionist, ecologist, biblical critic, naturalist, and offended American include the sudden rise of marijuana, political rhetoric, usury beyond decency, and by liberals and conservatives alike the erosion of personal liberty, especially of speech and universities. But the poems, from laments, to loves, to joy, to pathos and death, poverty to wealth, nature, art, music, and poetry itself are presented in almost musical sadness or joy. The history of an intellectual 's scholarly travels, whereas some poems are for children, some for society, some attacking evils, some praising good people, with merit even in deference to religions, many nations, and his beloved homeland. The poems are in large part visits into nostalgia and sentiment. Cultures of many peoples in many nations are described, as are many situations in America. There is, of course, an American core, but surely this poet loves good peoples and the history of Greece, France, Scotland, Africa, Russia, and other places. Loves genuine for many women inspired many lovely poems, a lot of romance. But profound in its argument is love for the poor and unhappy people, love for art, nature, philosophy, even sports, science and math, even religions. It becomes unified by reason, his active caring, and his bursts of singing. Much attention is given to geography, history, science and nature.
